The Department of Biotechnology and Microbiology, recently held an Agar Art Competition. The event, judged by Prof. Punita Tiwari and Prof. Sharayu Ghonmode, showcased impressive creativity and skill from the participants. The winners of the competition were: First Place was awarded to Ms. Harshita Rohra, a second-year BSc student in CMBT; Second Place went to Ms. Pranali Mendhe, a second-year MSc student; and Third Place was earned by Ms. Mohit Khade, a second-year BSc student in CBM. The competition highlighted the intersection of scientific knowledge and artistic expression, with participants demonstrating exceptional talent in their agar-based art creations.

Action Taken: The department organized an art competition that saw participation from a total of 72 students. Through the event, students learned the intricacies of creating agar art, including handling techniques and the diverse applications of agar in practical and project work. The competition provided valuable hands-on experience and deepened their understanding of this artistic medium. Additionally, students gained insights into innovative uses of agar, enhancing their skills and creativity in the process.
