Introducing the "Japanese Rice cultivation method" to India

During his time as the First Agriculture Minister of India, Dr. Panjabrao Deshmukh which turned out to be a game changer in the production of rice, giving very high yields. Japanese rice cultivation method was highly adapted in India because the method includes use of high yielding varieties of seeds. Initial raising of seedling is done in nursery and is protected from initial infections and then transferred to fields and planted in rows to make weeding easy. It uses high dose of fertilizers.
