Constitution of India

The constitution of India is the longest written constitution of any country on earth. B.R. Ambedkar was the chairman of drafting committee and he was widely considered to be its chief architect.

The constitution of India is the supreme law of India. The constitution of India came into force from 26 January, 1950. A special committee was gathered to draw and outline the constitution. The constitution gives all the details related to what is legal and what is illegal in the country. In addition, with the enforcement of the constitution, the Indian sub-continent became the Republic of India. Besides, the drafting committee consist of seven members that were supervised by B.R. Ambedkar. Moreover, the constitution helps in maintaining prosperity and peace in the country. As we know that Indian constitution is very long and there are many uniqueness about it that you won't find in any other country's constitution. The first thing that makes Indian constitution different is its length. The constitution of Indian contains a preamble, 448 fourhundred, and forty eight Articles, twenty five groups, twelve Schedules, and five appendices. Moreover, it takes around 3 years to complete the draft of the constitution. The constitution is hard as well as soft both at the same time while on one side the supreme power needs to be followed carefully to maintain the law and order in country, on the other side the citizen can appeal to amend the outdated provision. But there are certain provisions that can be easily amended and there are some that take a lot of time and resources to amend. Furthermore, there have been more than 100 amendments in the constitution from the day of its enforcement. The original constitution does not have preamble but it was later on added to the constitution. Also, it gives a detailed account of the constitution's philosophy. The preamble states that India is a socialist, secular, sovereign and Democratic republic. In addition,

It believes in equality, justice and freedom of its people. The constitution puts the welfare of its people first rather than the state. According to the constitution India is a secular country that means it does not give special status to any religion. Anyone can perform his religion freely. It means there is no dictator or monarch, no one rule the country. Moreover, it nominates and elects its head every 5 years. The constitution of the country states every fundamental duty of its citizens under it. These duties have to be followed by all the citizens of the country equally whether its a rich person or a poor one. Besides, these duties include the respect of national flag and national anthem, integrity and unity of the country, the safeguard of public property, and various others. Directive state principle is the simple guidelines to the state in which ensure the development of its socio-economy via its policies. In conclusion, the constitution serves as guidelines for every citizens. Also, law and rule are completely defined in the constitution. The head of the drafting committee has done a remarkable job that no one can forget. He and his team draft constitution that no other country has able to do till date. Besides, the constitution has helped India to attain the status of the Republic in the world.

Indian Judiciary System and Indian Penal Code (IPC)

The judiciary system in india is one of the most constructive & effectual system in the world. The government of india has three major branches - legislature, judiciary & executive. Judiciary is an important branch of government of india. It is an independent body & is different from executive & legislature. The constitution establishes a single integrated & independent judicial system for the whole India. The indian judiciary is the interpreter of the constitution of India, guardian of fundamental rights & freedoms of the people of India. It has three level structure as:

Supreme Court :- is the highest level of court of Indian judiciary system. The supreme court of India was inaugurated on 28th January 1950. & is situated in Delhi. It consist of 31 Judges & one chief Justice.

Subordinate courts (District & Session courts) :- are subordinate to state High courts. The district courts are mainly run by the government appointed district Judges. There are in total 351 district courts in operation out of which 342 are of states while 9 are of union territories.

Lok Adalats :- are known as people's court established by the government to settle the dispute through conciliation & compromise. The first Lok Adalat, was held in Chennai in 1986. It is headed by the sitting or retired judicial officer as chairman & two other members.

The Indian Penal Code (IPC)

Indian Penal Code is the criminal law which covers most of the crimes & their punishments. The Indian Penal code, in its basic form, is a document that lists all the cases & punishments that a person committing any crimes is liable to be charged with. It covers any person of Indian origin. The exceptions are the military & other armed forces, they cannot be charged based on the Indian Penal Code. They have a different set of laws under the Indian Penal Code as well. The Indian Code is sub-divided into twenty three chapters, comprises total 511 sections.

Indian constitution has established an integrated & hierarchical judicial system.

The Indian Penal Code is the official criminal code of the Republic of India. It came in force in 1862 in all British Presidencies although it did not apply to the Princely states, which had their own courts & legal systems. The first draft of the Indian Penal Code was prepared by the First Law Commission, chaired by Thomas Barington Macaulay.

Essay - Constitution Day

The national constitution day which is also celebrated as National law day or the Samvidhan Diwas is celebrated on the 26th of November every year to commemorate the adoption of the Constitution of India. The Republic Day is celebrated on 26 January 1950, which was the day when the constitution of India was formally adopted in practice.

The history of our constitution starts way back before 1947 when we attained Independence from the British. When the Quit India Movement and the freedom struggle for India began and the lawyers and different intellectual in the country headed by Dr. B.R. Ambedkar, started writing the constitution of India.

There is a gap of 2 months b/w the national constitution day and Republic day & in these 2 months, the huge constitution of India was thoroughly read and translated from English to Hindi and different languages. The assembly, at that point of time, met for around 11 months before the constitution was actually adopted on the national constitution day. The constitution was formally adopted in the year 1950 after it was passed and accepted by the constituent assembly of India. The constitution, when it was adopted on January 26th was not perceived well by many cities & the issues of language, rights, minorities and the entire government structures were debated in the Parliament & around the country.

Constitution of India declares a socialist, secular, democratic & sovereign republic that gives the citizens of the country with equality, justice and liberty and promotes the values of the fraternity. The constitution is the sole backbone of the country that has kept the country together, with so many diverse cultures, languages & ethnicities since 70 years.

The Indian Constitution is one of the biggest constitutions in the world because the creator of the constitution took the essence from the American, British and
