Enhancing the Quality of Educational Research at PhD Leve

Abstract

While many candidates have passed their PhD in Education in India, there are many more candidates whose doctoral research works are still ongoing. Additionally, recent statistics indicate a 50 per cent jump in the PhD enrolment, which necessitates a quality assessment of the educational research at the PhD level. Accordingly, this presentation which aims to provide some recommendations to enhance the quality of educational research at the PhD level is divided into three interrelated segments. Segment 1 delves into personal experience and reflection as an external examiner or adjudicator who has assessed many PhD theses in Education from India, identifying some critical areas in research focus, literature review, research design, and method of analysis which could be enhanced. Segment 2 reviews the research designs that should be in a PhD scholar's repertoire of educational research methods, particularly concerning quantitative, qualitative and mixed-methods research, so that when the scholar has completed his doctoral study, his educational research methodological knowledge is encompassing and well grounded. Segment 3 introduces some essential data analysis procedures that are amenable to the analysis of quantitative and qualitative data gathered, depending on the research questions. Although the research methodology discussed in this presentation is directly related to educational research, it can also be extrapolated to research in other fields and specialisations apart from education.
